Welcome to this March 2015 edition.

As we know, the scourge of terrorism is with us, and probably here to stay for the foreseeable future. We've seen the grief and pain it can cause to people going about their ordinary, everyday lives. But how likely is it to strike at us, in our own businesses, and what can we do to minimise the risk? We'll hear a sober assessment shortly from global terrorism expert, Professor Greg Barton of Monash University.

Our longterm economist Professor Neville Norman returns to weigh up the economic factors affecting our business lives, and how they're likely to play out for the rest of the year.

Business consultant John Cleary returns to the program with some interesting insights into the integrated organisation. There are many benefits to being integrated, we'll hear - from clients being more confident of suppliers, to staff working harmoniously to deliver quality outcomes for the client.

Dr Michael Schaper, deputy chair of the A-triple-C, takes us on a tour of the scams and swindles that are currently at play in the Australian business world.

Business exit strategist Denise Hall, of businessbrokers.com.au, talks us through the big questions to do with selling up and moving on. It's not just about what you do with your business.

Also this month, Reyna Matthes from Executive Central gives us an insight into recognising and developing our strengths to achieve higher levels of effective leadership. Reyna gives us an overview of the workshop she'll be presenting as part of the Chartered Accountants Australia and New Zealand 2015 Business Forum Conference.

Tax expert Michael Jones of Cummings Flavel McCormack invites us to consider the EXCITING bits of the Fringe Benefits Tax. Yes folks, he's serious!

Stock Doctor Elio D'Amato assesses the sharemarket reporting season, and, taking us out on a positive note, gifted storyteller Robyn Moore uses the power of the word to remind us of the things that really matter in work and life, and how to make sure we don't lose sight of them.

Enjoy!
